Dear Mr. Livingston:

Recently I have been wondering if you have ever receivbd an invitation to become a member of our Society. From what you said when you were here, I have decided to extend such an invitation to you, although at the same time I want to have you feel that there is no need whatsoever for you to become a member in order to take advantage of the opportunities of either our Collection or library. You would receive our publications as a member, however, and if this suggestion receives your favorable consideration, I should be very happy.

I am taking the liberty of enclosing an application card.

Very truly yours,

Secretary

Yours very respectfully,
